II. Jurisdiction, Venue and Discovery Control Plan

5. Ad Litem seeks damages within the jurisdictional limits of this Court. Jurisdiction in this Court is proper under Sections 32.006 and 32.007 of the Texas Estates Code and under Sections 112.054, 113.151 and 115.001 of the Texas Trust Code. Venue is proper in Travis County because there is a corporate trustee and the situs of administration of the Trust is maintained in Travis County.

6. Discovery in this case is being conducted pursuant to a level 3 discovery control plan.

III. Facts

7. In September 2008 Hurricane Ike greatly damaged the oil and gas properties that were the source of virtually all of the Trust's income. By failing to take appropriate action within a reasonable time of this damage, the Trustees benefited themselves personally but caused the trust estate millions of dollars in damages. These damages include the steady decline in the value of the Trust's property and millions of dollars in administrative expenses charged to the Trust. The Trustees received more than $1,000,000 in compensation during this period while the Trust's beneficiaries received nothing. BNYM has breached fiduciary duties owed to the AAL Parties. This was done intentionally and in bad faith and constitutes negligence, gross negligence, and reckless indifference. It should be held liable.

A. Before 2009 the revenues from the Trust's main asset—a 25% net profits interest in offshore oil and gas properties—were sufficient to pay administrative expenses and provide substantial distributions to the Beneficiaries.

8. The Trust was created by trust agreement (the "Trust Agreement" or "Agreement") dated January 1, 1983, by and between Tenneco Offshore Company, Inc., acting on behalf of the owners of units as trustor and Texas Commerce Bank National Association, Horace C. Bailey, Joseph C. Broadus and F. Arnold Daum as original trustees. The Trustees are successors to the original trustees. Conwill served through 2009; Owen replaced him in 2010. The Agreement has not been amended and is irrevocable.

9. The principal asset of the Trust is a 99.99% interest in the TEL Offshore Trust Partnership (the "Partnership"). Chevron U.S.A., Inc. ("Chevron") owns the other

0.01% interest in the Partnership and operates the Partnership. The beneficiaries of the Trust (the “Beneficiaries”) hold units in the Trust which are publicly traded securities.

10. The Partnership’s principal asset is a net profits interest (the “Net Profits Interest”) in oil and gas properties (the “Royalty Properties”) located offshore of Louisiana. Chevron operates some of the Royalty Properties.

11. The Trust’s Net Profits Interest is burdened by a share of the Partnership’s operating and production costs (“operating costs”). In addition, the Trust has significant general and administrative expenses, including Trustee compensation, attorney’s fees and accountant fees (“administrative expenses”).

12. Historically, the Trustees reserved a portion of royalty income from the trust estate to provide funds to pay administrative expenses. The Trustees determined that the reserve amount should be three times the yearly average of the Trust administrative expenses over the last three years, making it sufficient to cover approximately three years of Trust administrative expenses.

13. The Trustees did not have to pay the Trust’s share of operating costs from the trust estate. Rather, those costs were deducted from the Trust’s share of revenue under its net profits interest. But in months when the Trust’s share of the losses exceeded its share of the revenues, the loss deficit was carried forward to the next month, creating a net loss carryforward. The losses would continue to be carried forward until they were reimbursed by revenues.

14. Finally, the general partner, Chevron, as operator of many of the properties, maintained a special cost escrow account to set aside money for future capital expenditures, like plugging and abandoning wells.

15. In sum, before 2009 the Trust and the Partnership operated in this manner:

a. Oil and gas production from the Royalty Properties generated income to the Partnership through its net profits interest;

b. Some of the income paid the Partnership's share of operating costs;

c. Some of the income paid the Trust's administrative expenses;

d. Some of the income was held in reserve for future administrative expenses; and

e. Excess income was distributed to the Beneficiaries.

16. The operator of the Royalty Properties did not explore for new production. The engineers that the Trust hired never identified any unproven reserves or different formations that might be productive. Rather, the operator produced oil and gas from existing, proven reserves that had been producing since the 1970s. Production from all oil and gas properties declines over time and eventually ceases. Inevitably, the Trustees would have to decide when to pull the plug and maximize the benefit to Beneficiaries by selling the Net Profits Interest. By 2007, all but eight of the Royalty Properties had stopped production. Still, through 2008, the annual distributions to the Beneficiaries were significant. For example, in 2008 the Trust distributed $13,298,654 to Beneficiaries, or $2.80 per unit. That all changed after Hurricane Ike.

- B. In September 2008, Hurricane Ike destroyed the property generating around half of the Trusts' income (Eugene Island 339) and delayed revenues from the property generating the other half of revenues (Ship Shoal 182/183), altogether eliminating distributions.

17. Of the six Royalty Properties still in production in 2008, two contributed more than 98.5% of the Trust's revenues: Eugene Island 339 and Ship Shoal 182/183. In the third quarter of 2008, for instance, Eugene Island 339 and Ship Shoal 182/183 each contributed over 48% of the net proceeds to the Trust.

18. In September 2008 Hurricane Ike swept through the Louisiana gulf coast area. Ike was devastating to the Royalty Properties. It completely destroyed all the wells, production platforms, sales platforms and other infrastructure on Eugene Island 339. It destroyed the infrastructure, including the pipelines that enabled sales of production, from Ship Shoal 182/183.

19. Ike eliminated virtually all the Trust income, and in the immediate aftermath it was unclear if that income would ever be restored. With little to no revenue coming in, the Trustees tapped the reserve to pay administrative expenses, rapidly depleting it. In 2008 the reserve for trust expenses was $2,233,291. By the end of 2009, the reserve had fallen by almost a million dollars to $1,263,080. That was barely enough to provide a reserve for one year of administrative expenses. By the end of 2010 the reserve was down to $352,017.

20. Further, although the Trust was not paying operating costs out of pocket, the operating losses were mounting, increasing the net loss carryforward that would have to be repaid before the Trust would receive any distributions of profits. At the beginning of 2008, there was no net loss carryforward. By the end of 2011, however, it had grown to almost $7 million. The chart below shows a change in the net loss carryforward from 2008 to 2012.

Year	Net Loss Carry Forward (as of Q 1 of following year)
2006	$0
2007	$0
2008	($1,174,901)
2009	($6,066,487)
2010	($3,684,455)
2011	($6,806,012)
2012	($6,940,696)

21. As the chart reflects, there was a temporary drop in the net loss carryforward in 2010, as it went from over $6 million to $3.7 million. While that might appear to have been a good thing, that temporary decrease in the net loss carryforward resulted from a short-sighted decision by Chevron to use the funds in the special cost escrow account to decrease the net loss carryforward. As noted above, the funds in the special cost escrow account were to be used for future capital expenditures such as plugging the wells. By using them to decrease the net loss carryforward Chevron was, in effect, robbing Peter to pay Paul. In the future, Chevron would have to replenish the special cost escrow account using revenues that might otherwise be distributed to the Trust.¹

¹ Actually, BNYM urged Chevron to do something even more foolhardy: distribute the special cost escrow account to the Trust for it to pay its expenses. That would have further guaranteed no distributions to the Beneficiaries for the indefinite future.

22. BNYM's SEC filings told some of the grim tale. In its 2008 Form 10-K (filed in March 2009), BNYM said: "Future distributions by the Trust are expected to be severely negatively impacted, and there may not be sufficient Net Proceeds from the Royalty Properties to make one or more future distributions." In each Form 10-K since then until the filing of this suit (2009 – 2014), BNYM said "there are not likely to be sufficient Net Proceeds from the Royalty Properties for the Trust to make a regularly scheduled quarterly distribution to Beneficiaries for the foreseeable future," or something substantially similar.

C. An undisclosed DeGolyer & MacNaughton report revealing total future net revenues of $0 should have spurred BNYM into action.

23. After Hurricane Ike, in accordance with the requirements of the Trust, the petroleum engineering firm of DeGolyer & MacNaughton performed a reservoir study to determine the reserves attributable to the Royalty Properties and the Partnership's projected future net revenues as of an October 31, 2008 valuation date. DeGolyer & MacNaughton prepared such reports for the Trustees and included the "total future net revenues" attributable to the Partnership's interest that the Trustees included in the Trust's required securities filings. The report issued as of October 31, 2008 reported total future net revenues attributable to the Trust's interest in the Royalty Properties of $24,225,749. However, unlike prior reports prepared by DeGolyer & MacNaughton, this report had modifying language. In the October 31, 2008 report, DeGolyer & MacNaughton advised that due to the damage to the Eugene Island 339 platforms and wells caused by Hurricane Ike and the uncertainties associated with their redevelopment, the Eugene Island 339 field has been omitted from the report at the request of Chevron. The report further advised that DeGolyer & MacNaughton had agreed to omit Eugene Island 339 from the report with the understanding that “this report will be updated once Chevron’s assessment of Eugene Island 339 is completed.”

24. In March, 2009, BNYM filed its annual form 10-K, advising the SEC and current and potential unit holders that the total future net revenues for the Trust were $24,225,749. The costs associated with the plugging and abandonment related to Eugene Island 339, estimated to be approximately $61 million for 2009, alone, were not included. At no point did BNYM disclose in the Trust’s 2009 10-K filing that DeGolyer & MacNaughton’s October 31, 2008 report was incomplete and would be updated.

25. In May 2009, DeGolyer & MacNaughton did update their report. The updated report—as of March 31, 2009—included all the properties held by the Trust, and was the first complete report provided since DeGoyler & MacNaughton’s October 31, 2007 report (“March 31, 2009 Report”). This March 31, 2009 Report reflected total future net revenues for the Trust properties of $0 – below the $2 million minimum which could have triggered termination of the Trust under the terms of the Trust Agreement.

26. BNYM received a copy of the March 31, 2009 Report reflecting zero future net revenues for the Trust properties in April 2009, but did not disclose it to the Beneficiaries and did nothing to protect the Beneficiaries or Trust property.

27. After the issuance of the March 31, 2009 Report BNYM, on behalf of the Trust, made six filings with the SEC in 2009 and three filings with the SEC in 2010. At no time, in any of those filings, did BNYM acknowledge the existence of the March 31, 2009 Report, much less its disturbing findings.

- D. In December 2009, Chevron decided not to redevelop Eugene Island 339 and instead gave the rights to a third party, thereby reducing the Trust's profit interest by 65%.

28. Production from Ship Shoal 182/183 eventually resumed in October 2009.

Because Hurricane Ike had completely destroyed all the wells and infrastructure on Eugene Island 339, it would have to be completely redeveloped for any production to resume. BNYM did not know the important fact of whether or not Chevron would choose to spend the money necessary to redevelop Eugene Island 339. At this critical time, BNYM could have taken steps to protect the Beneficiaries, such as inquiring about Chevron's intentions or seeking other solutions that would preserve value for the Beneficiaries. It did not.

29. Instead, after evaluating the economics of redeveloping Eugene Island 339 for over a year, Chevron decided not to spend its own money to do so. Rather, without BNYM's knowledge, Chevron made a farmout agreement with Arena Energy. Under this agreement, Chevron gave Arena the right to drill wells and, upon drilling a producing well, Arena would earn 65% of the working interest. This 65% was not subject to the Trust's Net Profits Interest. As a result of Chevron's farmout, the Trust's share of any revenues from any new wells on Eugene Island 339 would be cut by 65%. Thus, even if Arena were able to restore Eugene Island 339 to pre-Ike production levels and revenues, the Trust would only get 35% of what it had before. Given that pre-Ike revenue from Eugene Island 339 was approximately half of the Trust's revenue, in the best of all worlds the Trust stood to lose more than 30% of its revenue (65% of 50% equals 32.5%) even if Eugene Island 339 were to return to pre-Ike levels. Arena eventually drilled four wells in 2012 and 2013, but production never came close to pre-Ike levels.

- E. Faced with the prospect of no future net revenues and mounting costs, from 2009 until 2014 BNYM did nothing to protect the Beneficiaries and Trust property. Instead, it borrowed money and sold interests to pay itself and the other Trustees—steps that benefited the Trustees but not the Beneficiaries and ensured that the Beneficiaries would never see another dime.

30. For more than a year after Ike, the Trust received no income from the Royalty Properties. Eventually some revenues from Ship Shoal 182/183 resumed. Meanwhile, the administrative expenses continued and even increased.

31. By April of 2009 things were looking dire. The administrative expenses were close to a million dollars per year, and the Trust only had reserves sufficient to pay those expenses for a little over one more year. The March 31, 2009 Report found that the Trust had ZERO future net revenues. That was a huge red flag. By the end of 2009, the net loss carryforward had grown to more than $6 million. By 2010 things were worse. Trust administrative expenses were still running at close to a million dollars, but the reserve to pay those expenses was down to $352,000. And, as noted, Chevron had completely depleted the special escrow account to lower the net loss carryforward. As of the end of 2010 there still was no production from Eugene Island 339. Below are the relevant numbers for the end of the years 2009-2010:

Year	Distributable Income	G&A Expenses	Reserve for Future Trust Expenses	Special Escrow Account	Net Loss Carry Forward (as of Q 1 of following year)
2008	$13,298,654	$840,455	$2,233,291	$4,325,503	($1,174,901)
2009	$0	$971,545	$1,263,080	$4,306,275	($6,066,487)

2010	$0	$911,245	$352,017	$1,000	($3,684,455)
------	-----	-----------	-----------	---------	---------------

32. In short, it was obvious by April 2009 that the revenues would not be sufficient to cover Trust expenses for the foreseeable future. Indeed, BNYM admitted this in its SEC filings.

33. By April 2009 BNYM knew the dire situation but failed to disclose to the Beneficiaries the true futility of continuing to hold the Net Profits Interest. It even considered various options to deal with the problem, including selling part of the property, obtaining loans and resigning as Trustee. Again, it did not disclose any of these options—or that it was considering these options—to the Beneficiaries.

34. The Trust Agreement empowered the Trustees to sell the Net Profits Interest. One of the purposes of the Trust is to protect and conserve, for the benefit of the Beneficiaries, the Trust property. The Trustees had a duty to protect the Beneficiaries' interests by selling the Net Profits Interest when it still had value rather than blindly holding onto them until they had no value to the Beneficiaries.

35. Indeed, the Corporate Trustee considered selling all the Net Profits Interest in 2010. But rather than selling the Net Profits Interest in 2010, BNYM used Trust money (more than $120,000 through 2015) to obtain directors and officers liability insurance to protect Swanson, Evans and Owen. Doing so placated Swanson, Evans and Owen, and allowed BNYM to continue administering the Trust and to continue to receive trustees' fees. Again, the Trustees put their interests ahead of the interests of the Beneficiaries by using Trust funds in this way.

36. While the cash flow situation was bad, the Royalty Properties still had significant value. Even though the properties were not profitable for the Trust with its huge annual administrative expenses, they could have been sold to someone who could operate them profitably without those expenses. The Trustees could have sold all the Net Profits Interest after Hurricane Ike for millions of dollars. Each year the petroleum engineering firm of DeGolyer and MacNaughton determined the reserves of the Royalty Properties and the Partnership's projected future net revenues as of October 31. The Trustees included the "total future net revenues" attributable to the Partnership's interest in its securities filings. As of October 31, 2010 the DeGolyer and MacNaughton report showed that the total future net revenues were close to $20 million.

37. Only by promptly selling the entire Net Profits Interest could the Trustees maximize the value of the Trust assets for the Beneficiaries. The Trustees could have sold the Net Profits Interest in order to protect the Trust assets without Beneficiary approval. If it wished, it could have sought and obtained court approval of the sale. Or the Trustees could have sought Beneficiary approval of the sale. Paragraph 6.04 of the Trust Agreement authorizes the Trustees to sell some or all of the Trust property upon the affirmative vote of the Beneficiaries holding a majority of the Trust units represented at a meeting called for this purpose. The Trustees could call such a meeting at any time. Although BNYM considered this option as early as 2009, it never called for a vote. The Corporate Trustee explained that it did not call for a vote because it allegedly received unsolicited calls from a few Beneficiaries requesting that the Trust hold on to the properties. BNYM never asked the Beneficiaries whether they wanted a vote, and it never attempted to call a meeting.

38. BNYM's reasons for not pursuing this option are implausible. The Corporate Trustee claims that it was concerned about the cost and difficulty of notifying all the Beneficiaries and scheduling a vote, but that cost would have been a fraction of one year's worth of administrative expenses. While BNYM's reasons for not calling for a Beneficiary vote are implausible, its motivation for not doing so is all too obvious: the longer the Trust continued, the more BNYM would get paid. BNYM sought to shut down the Trust only when there was no possibility that it would get paid.

39. Instead, in 2011, needing money to pay their compensation and other expenses, the Trustees agreed to sell 20% of the Trust's Net Profits Interest at auction. RNR Production Land and Cattle Company ("RNR") won the auction with a bid of $1,600,000. The sale was effective on October 27, 2011. All the net proceeds the Trust received went to pay trustee compensation and other Trust administrative expenses; none went to the Beneficiaries.

40. The 2011 sale to RNR proved that the Net Profits Interest had value. Rather than selling the remaining Net Profits Interest at that time or shortly thereafter, though, BNYM did nothing. Selling 20% of the Net Profits Interest in 2011 to pay trustee compensation and other administrative expenses caused the Trust to descend into a death spiral. After the sale, the Trust had only 80% of its revenue stream—already reduced by the Arena farmout—but still had roughly the same amount of annual administrative expenses. This sale assured that the Trustees would have to take other extreme measures to continue to pay their compensation and other future administrative expenses and also made any future distributions to Beneficiaries less and less likely.

41. Even the short term reduction of the net loss carryforward in 2010 was gone by 2011; by then the net loss carryover was close to $7 million. As a result of the RNR sale the reserve for trust expenses was up to $944,000—only enough for about a year of Trust administrative expenses. And, of course, the special cost escrow account was gone.

42. By the end of 2012 the reserve for trust expenses was only around $224,000. The net loss carryforward was approximately $7 million, and, of course, there was no special cost escrow account. The chart below summarizes these amounts:

Year	Distributable Income	G&A Expenses	Reserve for Future Trust Expenses	Cost Escrow Account	Net Loss Carry Forward (as of Q 1 of following year)
2008	$13,298,654	$840,455	$2,233,291	$4,325,503	($1,174,901)
2009	$0	$971,545	$1,263,080	$4,306,275	($6,066,487)
2010	$0	$911,245	$352,017	$1,000	($3,684,455)
2011	$0	$894,113	$944,917	$1,000	($5,444,265)
2012	$0	$721,053	$223,925	$1,000	($5,552,002)

43. In response to this predicament BNYM chose not to sell the Net Profits Interest, or to call a meeting of Beneficiaries to vote to approve the sale of a Net Profits Interest, or to go to court to ask for relief before the Trust became even more financially troubled. Instead, BNYM first caused the Trust to borrow $300,000 from BNYM's affiliated bank to keep paying trustee compensation and expenses. Then on August 1, 2013 the Trustees sold 25% of the Trust's remaining Net Profits Interest at auction to RNR. The net proceeds to the Trust from this sale were $1,151,885. Of those, BNYM used $300,000 to repay the loan. As a result of the second sale the Trust had an even lower income stream with which to pay administrative expenses. Again, the Beneficiaries received nothing.

44. Then, on October 1, 2014 BNYM caused the Trust to borrow $363,000 more from BNYM's affiliated bank. Finally, on September 25, 2015 BNYM executed another promissory note with the bank, this time obligating the Trust in the amount of $1,056,885 (this amount included the previous $363,000). Of course, these loans further assured there would never be any money for the Beneficiaries, only for the Trustees. Even with the loans, by the end of 2013 the reserve for Trust expenses covered only about a year's worth of Trustee fees. There was no special cost escrow account. The net loss carryforward was around $5 million.

45. From 2009 through 2014, administrative expenses have averaged more than $850,000 per year, including more than $218,000 per year in Trustee compensation:

	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	Total
Total trustee compensation	$238,849	$299,336	$305,687	$129,754	$0	$339,414	$1,313,040
Total accountant fees	$219,050	$212,550	$183,000	$158,000	$143,000	$147,000	$1,282,650
Subtotal -- trustee compensation and accountant fees	$457,899	$511,886	$488,687	$287,754	$143,000	$486,414	$2,595,690

	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	Total
Total general and administrative expenses	$971,545	$911,245	$894,113	$721,053	$502,203	$1,109,000	$5,949,614
G&A expenses other than trustee compensation and accountant fees	$513,646	$399,359	$405,426	$433,299	$359,203	$622,586	$3,353,924

§ -- Trustee compensation was not reported on the 2008 10-K, but it likely was paid.

The Trust continued to incur administrative expenses after 2014, which expenses are not included in the above table.

46. While the net loss carryforward has lingered and administrative expenses have continued to mount, the value of the Trust's property has declined. Below is the decline in total future net revenues:

Year	D&L Reserve Study Total Future Net Revenues as of Oct. 31	Decline in Value From This Year to 2015	Notes
2007	$54,800,000	($52,617,338)	Last report prior to Hurricane Ike
2008	$24,200,000	($22,017,338)
2009	$13,100,000	($10,917,338)
2010	$19,800,000	($17,617,338)	Last report before the sale of 20% of the Net Profits Interest on October 27, 2011, to pay expenses
2011	$11,500,000	($9,317,338)	Reflects the reduced Net Profits Interest due to the 2011 sale

Year	D&L Reserve Study Total Future Net Revenues as of Oct. 31	Decline in Value From This Year to 2015	Notes
2012	$14,500,000	($12,317,338)	Last report prior to the sale of 25% of the remaining Net Profits Interest on October 31, 2013, to pay expenses
2013	$8,600,000	($6,417,338)	Reflects the reduced Net Profits Interest due to the 2011 and 2013 sales
2014	$7,304,878	($5,122,216)
2015	$2,182,662

47. Total future net revenues attributable to the Partnership's interest in the Royalty Properties were estimated at $2,182,662 as of October 31, 2015, based the DeGolyer and MacNaughton reserve study. This is approximately $17,600,000 less than total future net revenues estimated as of October 31, 2010. During this time, the Beneficiaries received no benefit from the Trust's retention of the Net Profits Interest. The only benefit went to the Trustees personally and to the their lawyers, accountants and engineers.

48. Since April 2009, BNYM knew that there would be insufficient revenue to make distributions to Beneficiaries for the foreseeable future. The writing was on the wall—and in big red letters. By the first part of 2009, and certainly by the end of 2009 at the latest, when Chevron opted not to redevelop Eugene Island 339, it was obvious that the Royalty Properties were in dire straits and could not provide distributions to the Beneficiaries for the foreseeable future, if ever. But at any time thereafter up to the time the Net Profits Interest was sold in 2016, the property still had substantial market value, as evidenced by, among other things, the sale to RNR in 2011. Had BNYM put the Beneficiaries' interests above its own, it would have begun pursuing the sale of all the properties in 2009. In the alternative, it should have pursued a sale of all the properties at some time prior to the sale in 2016. It could have sold the interest without a Beneficiary vote or it could have gotten authority for a sale by calling a meeting of all the Beneficiaries, fully disclosing the financial situation and asking for a vote to allow the sale. If it was unwilling to sell the property without a Beneficiary vote and an affirmative vote could not be obtained, then BNYM had a duty to seek court instructions or seek to modify the trust terms to address the situation—as it finally did in 2014, resulting in the eventual sale of the Net Profits Interest in 2016. Although BNYM knew of and even considered these options, it did none of them, in breach of its duties. Rather than looking for a way to sell all the Net Profits Interest and shutting down the Trust—preserving value for the Beneficiaries—BNYM did nothing except incur expenses, including paying itself close to a million dollars.

F. In 2014, when there was nothing left to pay them, the Trustees finally sought court approval to sell all of the Royalty Properties.

49. In July 2014, the Trustees filed this action to modify and terminate the Trust. The Trustees' authority to do so—Section 112.054 of the Texas Trust Code—did not change from 2009 through 2014: The Trustees were empowered to seek a court order, modifying the trust, terminating the Trust or directing the Trustees to sell the Net Profits Interest if the purposes of the Trust had become impossible to fulfill or if, because of changed circumstances since the drafting of the Trust agreement, the court order would further the purposes of the Trust. The Trustees admit in their Original Petition that these reasons exist. These reasons have existed since at least 2009, yet the Trustees waited until 2014 to file for court action and until 2016 to sell the Net Profits Interest.

50. The Trustees' delay in seeking the sale of all of the Trust's Net Profits Interest in the Royalty Properties and termination of the Trust has damaged the Trust and its Beneficiaries. This damage includes millions of dollars in unnecessary administrative expenses and a decline in value of the Trust's property in the millions of dollars.

51. The Trustees benefited personally by this delay by receiving more than $1,000,000 in Trustee compensation during this period. The Corporate Trustee also benefited because its affiliate bank received interest for the money loaned to BNYM.

G. BNYM intentionally breached the trust by paying itself what it wanted to be paid rather than following the compensation requirements of the Trust Agreement.

52. The Trust Agreement required the Corporate Trustee to keep track of the hours spent by its trust officer in order to determine the Corporate Trustee's compensation. The Corporate Trustee intentionally breached the trust by not tracking the hours spent but rather by paying itself a fee of its choosing. This breach of trust occurred from 2009 through 2016, and Ad Litem believes that it may have begun before 2009. From 2009 through 2016, the Corporate Trustee paid itself approximately $1,000,000 in breach of trust. This breach of trust was not disclosed to the Beneficiaries. It was clear, serious, and intentional.

H. Because of BNYM's breach of its duty of full disclosure and fraudulent concealment, the Beneficiaries did not discover and could not have discovered their claims until after discovery in this suit.

53. The Trustees unquestionably owe the Beneficiaries fiduciary duties. These duties include a duty of full disclosure of all material facts known to them that might affect the Beneficiaries' rights.

54. The only disclosures that the Trustees made to the Beneficiaries were those in SEC filings. As noted, those disclosures did state that "there are not likely to be sufficient Net Proceeds from the Royalty Properties for the Trust to make a regularly scheduled quarterly distribution to Beneficiaries for the foreseeable future." But the disclosures in the SEC filings omitted numerous material facts and misrepresented other material facts. Neither in their SEC filings nor in any other communication did the Trustees tell the Beneficiaries that:

- The March 2009 Report revealed total future net revenues of the Trust properties were $0, possibly triggering or authorizing termination of the Trust.
- The situation was so bad by 2009 that the Trustees were considering resigning;
- In 2009 the Trustees were considering selling all or some of the interests;
- As of late 2009 the Trustees were considering borrowing money to pay themselves and other administrative expenses;
- The Trustees considered calling a vote and let the Beneficiaries decide whether to sell all the Net Profits Interest, but the Trustees decided not to do so;
- Notwithstanding the destruction of Hurricane Ike, the Trustees could have sold all of the Net Profits Interest for the benefit of the Beneficiaries rather than continuing the Trust for their own benefit.
- The Corporate Trustee intentionally breached the trust by paying itself what it wanted rather than following the terms of the Trust Agreement.
- That the conduct of the Trustees was so egregious that it probably constituted bad faith, gross negligence, reckless indifference or intentional breach of trust that would enable the Beneficiaries to recover damages for the Trustees' breaches.

55. BNYM knew these facts were material and would have been important to the Beneficiaries, but they were never disclosed. In fact BNYM knew the Beneficiaries would not get another distribution from the Trust and concealed this fact to continue operating the Trust and paying itself. As a result, it was only after discovery in this case—and in particular the July 2016 deposition of the representative of the BNYM—that Ad Litem, any of the AAL Parties or any other beneficiary obtained—or could have obtained—knowledge of the Trustees’ breaches of fiduciary duties, their egregious nature and the damages therefrom. Accordingly, under the application of the discovery rule during an ongoing fiduciary relationship and/or the doctrine of fraudulent concealment, the running of any statute of limitations was suspended until the end of July 2016, when the fact of misconduct became apparent. Until then, the Beneficiaries were unaware of the need to inquire into the Trustees’ conduct.

56. In addition, the Trustees’ breaches of fiduciary duty and the harm caused therefrom continued from 2009 to the sale of the Net Profits Interest in 2016. Thus, the AAL Parties’ (and any other Beneficiaries’) causes of action for breach of fiduciary did not accrue until the Trustees’ breaches ceased.

IV. Causes of Action

A. Accounting

57. The foregoing paragraphs are fully incorporated herein.

58. BNYM has a duty to account to the Beneficiaries of the Trust under Section 113.151 of the Texas Trust Code if demanded to do so by a beneficiary. The Trustees also have a duty of full disclosure of all material facts known to them that might affect a beneficiary's rights. Montgomery v. Kennedy, 669 S. W. 2d 309, 313 (Tex. 1984).

59. BNYM has filed periodic disclosures with the Securities and Exchange Commission to comply with securities laws. These disclosures include annual Form 10-Ks filed on or about March 31 of each year.

60. The 10-K filings disclose significant "general and administrative expenses," trustee compensation and accounting fees. BNYM has also borrowed money from an affiliate of the Corporate Trustee to pay the Trust's financial obligations, including general and administrative expenses.

61. The general and administrative expenses of the Trust are material facts that affect the Beneficiaries' rights. In particular, these expenses in part have eliminated entirely the amount of distributions from the Trust to the Beneficiaries.

62. Ad Litem demands a detailed accounting of general and administrative expenses and trustee compensation for the years 2008 through the present and such other relevant information as the Court may determine within 60 days of the Court's order.

B. Breach of Fiduciary Duty

63. The foregoing paragraphs are fully incorporated herein.

64. BNYM owes the AAL Parties (and, of course, all the Beneficiaries) a duty to act competently and prudently. One of the express purposes of the Trust is to protect and conserve the Trust property for the benefit of the AAL Parties (and, of course, all the Beneficiaries). See Section 2.02(a) of the Trust Agreement. BNYM is required to take such actions as in its judgment are necessary, desirable or advisable to achieve the purposes of the Trust. See Section 6.01 of the Trust Instrument.

65. BNYM is required to manage Trust assets as a prudent investor would, considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the Trust, and in doing so it must exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution. TEX. TRUST CODE §117.004(a). In addition, BNYM has special skills or expertise to operate the Trust and its properties, including but not limited to special skills and expertise in the oil and gas industry – or at least it represented that it had special skills and expertise. As such, BNYM is required to use those special skills and expertise. TEX. TRUST CODE §117.004(f).

66. By its actions and inactions described above, BNYM failed to act competently and prudently. These breaches of BNYM's duty have damaged the Trust estate and caused harm to the AAL Parties. In addition, BNYM's actions and inactions described above created conflicts of interest and self-dealing transactions. For example:

- a. Its decision to borrow money from its affiliate, Bank of New York Mellon, that served no purpose but to provide sufficient funds for the payment of Trustees' fees and expenses constitutes a conflict of interest;
- b. Its decision to pay itself contrary to the terms of the Trust instrument; and
- c. Its decision to hold onto the Net Profits Interests so that the Trust could continue and so that it could continue to receive compensation to the detriment of the Beneficiaries.

67. BNYM also owes the AAL Parties (and, of course, all the Beneficiaries) the duty of loyalty. It was required to manage the Trust assets solely in the Beneficiaries' interest. TEX. TRUST CODE §117.007. It benefited personally by continuing to pay itself compensation while failing to act to protect and conserve the Trust property and the interests of the Beneficiaries. By its actions and inactions described above, BNYM has breached its duty of loyalty. These breaches have damaged the Trust estate and caused harm to the AAL Parties.

68. BNYM's actions constitute self-dealing. It profited from its decision to continue the Trust by receiving additional compensation. It profited from its decision to buy insurance to cover the Individual Trustees' actions rather than fulfilling its duties by selling the Net Profits Interest. BNYM profited from paying itself what it wanted to receive rather than following the compensation provisions of the Trust Agreement. BNYM must prove that its actions were fair and equitable to the AAL Parties.

69. BNYM owes the AAL Parties (and, of course, all the Beneficiaries) a duty to administer the Trust in good faith and in accordance with the purposes of the Trust.

TEX. TRUST CODE §111.0035(b)(4)(B). By its conduct described above, BNYM breached its duty to administer the Trust in good faith and in accordance with the purposes of the Trust. These breaches of BNYM's duty have damaged the Trust and the AAL Parties.

70. BNYM's failure to call for a vote of the Beneficiaries to sell the Royalty Properties was a breach of fiduciary duty. This breach of fiduciary duty damaged the Trust estate and caused harm to the AAL Parties.

71. BNYM had a duty to petition the court for an order to sell the Trust's Net Profits Interest in the Royalty Properties long before it filed its petition in July 2014.

72. Since 1984, Section 112.054(a) of the Texas Trust Code has permitted a trustee to petition a court for an order to deviate from the terms of a trust and/or to terminate a trust if its purposes have become impossible to fulfill. Since 2005, Section 112.054(a) of the Texas Trust Code also has permitted a trustee to petition a court for an order to deviate from the terms of a trust and/or to terminate a trust if, because of changed circumstances, the order would further the purposes of the trust, or if changing an administrative, non-dispositive provision of the trust instrument is necessary or appropriate to prevent waste or avoid impairment of the trust's administration. TEX. TRUST CODE §112.054(a)(2) and (3). In its 2014 petition BNYM admits that changed circumstances exist to justify a modification or termination of the Trust. Those circumstances existed in 2009 and have not changed. An order instructing the Trustees to sell the Net Profits Interest or changing the trust instrument to permit the sale of the Net Profits Interest would have prevented waste and avoided the impairment of the Trust's administration through the period beginning in 2009 and ending in 2014 when BNYM filed its action to terminate the Trust.

73. If a trustee knows or should know of: (a) circumstances that justify judicial action to modify an administrative provision of a trust and (b) the potential of those circumstances to cause substantial harm to the trust or its beneficiaries, the trustee has a duty to petition the court for appropriate modification of or deviation from the terms of the trust. Restatement (Third) of Trusts §66(2) (2003). Here, petitioning the court for an order to sell the Trust's share of the Royalty Properties (an administrative provision) would have prevented substantial harm to the Trust and the AAL Parties (and, of course, all the Beneficiaries) and would have triggered the termination of the Trust under Section 9.01(a) of the Trust Instrument. This action would have preserved value for the AAL Parties (and, of course, all the Beneficiaries) and eliminated millions of dollars in operating costs and administrative expenses.

74. By their actions and inactions described above, BNYM have breached this duty. These breaches of BNYM's duty have damaged the Trust estate and caused harm to the AAL Parties.

75. In addition, BNYM has breached its fiduciary duty by paying itself compensation contrary to the terms of the Trust Agreement. Rather than following the terms governing compensation in the Trust Agreement, BNYM paid itself what it wanted. This action shows an intentional disregard for Trustee's obligations under the Trust Agreement and is an intentional, serious breach of trust that has damaged the Trust estate and caused harm to the AAL Parties.

76. Because of this conduct, the Court should grant the following remedies:

a. The Court should charge BNYM with damages according to Texas Trust Code §114.001(c).

b. The Court should deny BNYM compensation and order it to disgorge all compensation, interest, liability insurance premiums and other benefits received by any one or more of BNYM. TEX. TRUST CODE §§114.008 and 114.009.

c. The Court should order BNYM to pay personally all attorney's fees and costs, including but not limited to BNYM's own attorneys' fees and costs as well as those of Ad Litem and any other party to this proceeding, and to reimburse any attorneys' fees and costs already paid from the Trust. See TEX. TRUST CODE §114.064 and "Claim for Ad Litem's Compensation and Expenses and For Award of Attorney's Fees and Costs Against Trustees" later in this pleading.

C. Negligence

77. The foregoing paragraphs are fully incorporated herein.

78. BNYM's actions and inactions constitute negligence that proximately and directly caused damage and injury to the Trust estate and the AAL Parties.

79. Because of these actions and inactions, the Court should enter judgment against BNYM in an amount equal to the actual damages sustained.

D. Gross Negligence, Reckless Indifference, Intentional Conduct and Bad

Faith

80. The foregoing paragraphs are fully incorporated herein.

81. BNYM's actions and inactions constitute gross negligence that proximately and directly caused damage and injury to the Trust estate and the AAL Parties. In addition, the Trustees acted with reckless indifference that proximately and directly caused damage and injury to the Trust estate and the AAL Parties. Finally, and in the alternative if necessary, BNYM has acted intentionally and in bad faith.

82. Because of these actions and inactions, the Court should enter judgment against BNYM in an amount equal to the actual damages sustained.

E. Fee Forfeiture and Punitive Damages

83. The foregoing paragraphs are fully incorporated herein.

84. BNYM's actions and inactions described above constitute a clear and serious breach of their fiduciary duty. Accordingly, the Court should order it to forfeit all compensation received under the Trust Agreement and to repay all compensation already received.

85. Pleading further and in the alternative if necessary, the Court should impose punitive damages against BNYM.

F. Claim for Ad Litem's Compensation and Expenses and For Award of Attorney's Fees and Costs Against Trustees

86. The foregoing paragraphs are fully incorporated herein.

87. Ad Litem is entitled to reasonable compensation for services and for reimbursement of costs as are equitable and just pursuant to Sections 114.064 and 115.014(e) of the Texas Trust Code.

88. In addition, because of the actions and inactions and breaches of fiduciary duties described above, pursuant to Section 114.064 of the Texas Trust Code the Court should order BNYM to pay personally all attorney's fees and costs, including but not limited to the Trustees' own attorneys' fees and costs as well as the compensation of Ad Litem and the reasonable and necessary attorney's fees and costs of Ad Litem and any other party to this proceeding. It is equitable and just to do so.

89. To the extent any of the amounts described in the preceding paragraph have already been paid from the Trust, BNYM should be ordered personally to reimburse those fees and costs.

90. Alternatively, if necessary, it would be equitable and just to pay Ad Litem's fees and expenses and those of his litigation counsel and experts from the trust estate of the Trust.

91. Alternatively, if necessary, if all of Ad Litem's compensation and expenses are not awarded against BNYM personally, the Court can determine whether Ad Litem's actions have benefited all Beneficiaries of the Trust. Under the common fund doctrine, Ad Litem's fees and expenses and those of his litigation counsel and experts should be borne by all who benefitted by his actions and not solely by the AAL Parties. Therefore, it would be equitable and just to pay those fees and expenses from the trust estate of the Trust.

PRAYER

Ad Litem prays that the Court will:

- a. Order BNYM to provide a detailed accounting of general and administrative expenses for the years 2008 through the present and such other information deemed relevant by the Court within 60 days of the Court's order;
- b. Charge BNYM with damages in accordance with Texas Trust Code §114.001(c);
- c. Order BNYM to pay money damages in an amount of the actual damages proximately caused by BNYM's negligence, gross negligence, intentional conduct and bad faith;
- d. Deny BNYM's compensation and order BNYM to disgorge all compensation, interest and other benefits received by it;
- e. Order BNYM to pay individually its own attorney's fees and costs and the reasonable and necessary attorney's fees and costs of each party to this proceeding and to reimburse any amounts already paid from the Trust;
- f. Award Ad Litem a reasonable fee for services and reimbursement of Ad Litem's costs and expenses, to be charged against the Trustees individually;
- g. Award punitive damages;
- h. Award pre-judgment and post-judgment interest; and
- i. Award the AAL Parties such other and further relief to which they may be entitled.
